North Western Fells

North west Wainwrights in a day. Despite the weather warnings we got really lucky. The day was pretty humid and got the occasional misty shower, which was welcomed. Was sweating so much especially on the climb up to Whiteless until Newlands pass. Felt pretty good throughout, glutes felt heavy at the start, I think this was from the heat at the failed Wasdale race last week. I feel redemption has been earned for that race after today.

Pretty familiar with most of the route, the drop off the side of Whinlatter was pretty steep and had to stomp through bracken until the road. The climb up Robinson had us on all fours until it levelled out a bit, the last climb up Castle Crag, despite it being the smallest Wainwright, felt like it really had the pants down. Short but steep on tired legs.

Well done to Tom Dransfield for doing the route also - very good climbing and had to wait for me on pretty much all summits. Thanks to Mylo Jewell for coming out supporting smashing in a big 20 miles and also to Callum N for coming out supporting a big chunk also.

Class day out.
